Ghana Water Project: It's happening

Athens College > Give > Student Initiatives > Ghana Water Project: It's happening

STUDENT INITIATIVES

Thank you for your support!

The student group "It's happening" of the Athens College Elementary School is raising money for the creation of a borehole in the village of Ekoso in the Kwahu region of mountainous Ghana. The village has 2000 inhabitants and a school. However, the only existing borehole has been destroyed, leaving the villagers without access to clean water.

In addition to the amount of money they will raise, the students are working closely with the volunteer Stefani Grigoriou from Cyprus, who will oversee the project in Ghana and will connect live with the students to enable them to follow the developments and co-organize actions with the local school.
